ABOUT THE EDITORS

YADIRA SÁNCHEZ (2015 Editor)

Yadira was born in Tlaxcala, Mexico. At the age of six she immigrated to the United States to reunite with her father who lived in Texas. After a year of living in Dallas Texas, her family moved to Pico Rivera, California. However, Yadira has lived half of her life between Mexico City and California. This transnational experience has made her conscious of the social, political, and economic impact, of immigration.

Yadira graduated from San Francisco State University with a B.A. in Political Science and a minor in Latina/o Studies. During her time at SF State she was an advocate and student organizer for undocumented students. In the last four summers Yadira was a teacher assistant at Aim High working with under resourced middle school youth from the Mission District.

Yadira was part of E4FC'S first Policy Advocacy team advocating for equitable access to financial aid resources for all undocumented students who desire to continue their higher education regardless of eligibility to state and federal programs. It is her desire to pursue a Master's Program in Public Policy to continue advocating for equitable and humane policies that will address systematic oppressions in education and immigration.

DENISSE ROJAS (2014 Co-editor)

Denisse was born in Mexico City and immigrated to Fremont, California as an infant. With the support of her family and community, Denisse graduated from UC Berkeley in 2012 with majors in Sociology and Integrative Biology. While at Cal she was a member of Rising Immigrant Scholars Through Education, the Biology Scholars Program, the UndocuAlly Training Project and the Haas Scholars Program. Through the Haas Scholars Program, she conducted a yearlong research project in UC Berkeley's Department of Plant and Microbial Biology.

Denisse then worked at UCSF's Pediatrics Department participating in a childhood obesity project. After graduating from college, Denisse worked at Laney College mentoring low-income and first-generation students pursuing science careers. As co-founder of Pre-Health Dreamers (www.phdreamers.org), an organization that supports undocumented students pursuing health and science careers, she believes every student has the right to pursue their career ambitions, regardless of their status. Denisse aspires to be an emergency physician that provides care to underserved communities.

NADIA ROJAS (2014 Co-editor)

Nadia was born in Mexico D.F., Mexico and came to the United States with her family when she was two years old. After graduating with honors from high school, she attended UC Berkeley and was part of the Biology Scholars Program. With the unwavering support of her parents and her two siblings, she graduated with a B.A. in ethnic studies and integrative biology in 2009. Nadia also received an A.A. degree in French at Chabot College in 2012. Nadia joined E4FC as part of the 2011- 2012 Student Outreach Team where she conducted numerous presentations to undocumented youth about attending and financing a college education. Currently, she is doing similar work with Graduates Reaching a Dream Deferred Northern California (GRADD) (facebook.graddnorcal) an organization whose aim is to advocate and support for undocumented students pursuing graduate or professional school. Nadia recently graduated with a Master of Public Health (MPH) from UC Davis. She hopes to research health disparities within underrepresented groups and work towards eliminating the disparities. Her ultimate goal is to promote health and social justice.
